SAVING STAMP CARDS TO BE DISTRIBUTED AT CATHOLIC CHURCHES

Tomorrow When Worshipers Will Have Opportunity to Subscribe: Stamps to Be Delivered.

In the vestibule and at the doors of all Catholic churches in the Pittsburgh diocese tomorrow circulars explaining the sale of War-Saving Stamps and Certificates will be distributed in accordance with instructions issued by Rt. Rev. Regis Canevin, bishop of Pittsburgh. Blue cards will be given to each person upon which they can indicate the number of stamps they wish to purchase. With name and address affixed the card may be dropped into letter boxes without postage. The mail carrier will later deliver the number of stamps ordered and receive payment for them.

To the request of James Francis Burke of Pittsburgh, state director of the stamp campaign for Western Pennsylvania, to authorize the distribution of cards and literature at the church doors, Bishop Canevin gave very ready assent, taking the occasion to say:

"There is in the purchase of the stamps a moral lesson of cooperation with the government, a pledge of personal loyalty to our institutions, and an exercise of the virtue of thrift and economy, which church and school and teachers of every class should not fail to inculcate constantly as a duty which we owe to our country."

How Patriot Soldiers Suffered.

In all the camp sites of the Revolution a surprising quantity of broken black bottles are found, indicating that the allowance of liquor must have been liberal. The elaborate preparations made today to protect the soldiers against the cold contrast oddly with the equipment of the men at Valley Forge. One of the surgeons who served at Valley Forge has left the following description of one of the Continental soldiers who was brought in to a camp hospital:

"His bare feet were seen through his worn shoes—his legs nearly naked from the tattered remains of an old pair of stockings—his breeches not sufficient to cover his nakedness—his shirt hanging in strings—his hair disheveled—his face meager—his whole appearance pictures a person for-aken and discouraged."

THE FEAR OF FLOOD IS NOW RAILROAD MEN'S BIG TROUBLE

gor of breaking its bounds. Along the Monongahela the ice gorges are still holding with the river rising slowly. From latest information at hand the Pittsburgh weather bureau announces that a flood is unlikely.

The ice in the Yough has broken about one mile above Ohioville and moved down, some lodging between the bridges at that place. Above this break the ice is still holding. At Ohioville the river has risen about four feet during the past two days. A drizzling rain was falling there at 2.30, but otherwise there were no signs of a general break-up.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon the Monongahela registered 16.3 feet at Brownsville and was rising at the rate of three inches an hour. The gorge at Randall was still holding and the ice in Cheat river had not begun to break. It estimated that the Allegheny will not move until there has been a further rise of four feet.

The Baltimore & Ohio is getting away from its own embargoes as rapidly as possible. It is making good headway in keeping the supply of raw materials moving to munitions and other favored industries as well as food and other products essential to the comforts of the people generally. It is, of course, restricted in the receipt of certain classes of freight which embargoes have been doled out by connecting lines in the east, but on the whole it is handling an increasing volume of freight.

The Somerset & Cambria branch, which was so completely blocked by snow and ice, has been opened as have all other branches on the Pittsburgh and Connelville divisions. That traffic will soon be restored to normal proportions is the belief of operating officials providing, of course, that a flood does not come which might bring about conditions even worse than prevailed during the extremely cold weather of the past few weeks.

ORDERS CLEAN SIDEWALKS

Mayor Duggan Says: Throwing of Ashes on Streets Must Stop Now.

Mayor Duggan this morning ordered the police to notify residents of the city that the throwing of ashes on the sidewalks and streets must now be stopped. The mayor let down on the ordinance regarding the distribution of ashes on the streets during the cold weather when they were exceedingly icy.

Some citizens are overdoing the ash scattering, however, and the mayor has ordered it stopped. He also requests that the sidewalks be cleared of the refuse since the snow had melted.

JUST GOT OVER A COLD

Look out for kidney troubles and backache. Colds overtax the kidneys and often leave them weak. For weak kidneys—well, read what a Connelville woman says:

"Mrs. Lizzie Knight, 401 Francis Ave., says: 'For years I was almost crippled with my back and couldn't find a remedy that would help me. The pains across my loins seemed to burn and I rapidly lost strength and was tired all the time. I could hardly get around the house to do my work. I had dizzy spells and headaches and my sight blurred. Colds settled on my kidneys. I was simply miserable with kidney trouble, but I found a cure when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Two boxes made me well and I have been entirely free from kidney trouble since.'"

The address of the afternoon, "The Call of the Service Flag," was delivered by Rev. W. B. Purnell of the Presbyterian church of Dawson. In a masterly way Rev. PIMPPLY? WELL, DON'T BE!

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Clearse the blood, the bowels and the liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's never any sickness or pain after taking them. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

DRAINS FREEZE UP

With No Means of Escape Water Accumulates in B. & O. Yards.

The freezing up of the drains in the Baltimore & Ohio yards has caused part of the tracks to be flooded. The thaw which set in Thursday melted the ice and snow between the rails. The water accumulated in a dip between the lower yards and the coaling station.

When an engine passed over the rails water would be showered out on both sides of it. Shop and office employees working in the yards had to get to their work in a roundabout way.

Improving on Nature.

One by one nature is being made to surrender her secrets to man by the steady progress of science. Not only a heretofore sacredly guarded secret—how earth was made, of what its rocks and minerals are composed—now being solved, but actual rocks and minerals are being reproduced by artificial means, reproduced in a much purer form than they were originally made by nature. The place at which these wonderful experiments are being conducted is the Carnegie geological laboratory, a part of the Carnegie Institute of Washington.

FOR BENEFIT OF RED CROSS

Pupils of East Huntingdon Township
May $330 in Thrift Stamps and Are Ready to Invest More for Uncle
Sam's War Fund; Notes of Interest.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, Feb. 9.—One of the largest attended dances in the town's history was held in the Reid hall last evening. Guests were present from Greensburg, Connelville and the surrounding towns. Miss Helen Bell Rush of Dawson sang some pretty selections and was prepared to respond to the many encores given by the dancers. Kiefer's orchestra furnished the music. The proceeds of the sale of tickets will be turned over to the Red Cross and this will be a surprise. The amount will be announced later when the tickets have all been turned into the committee. While all the committees worked the success of the affair was mostly due to Master of Ceremonies Edward Anderson whose hard work was highly commended. The guests were entertained with cards and at eleven o'clock lunch was served.

Buy Thrift Stamps.

The pupils of the East Huntingdon township high school are willing to help Uncle Sam all they can. The boys and girls realize that the sons of the U. S. A. are giving their lives for them and they are willing to sacrifice something for these noble souls. In the last week the high school pupils have purchased Thrift and War Savings stamps to the amount of $330. Almost all of the one hundred pupils having done a bit. The pupils are not only lending money to the government but they all know all the boys must have comforts, so the Juniors class presented the play, "Safety First" the net proceeds of which went to the Red Cross. The amount turned over to the Red Cross was $118.71. Patriotic Service.

The Scottdale Baptist church is arranging a patriotic service to be given in the church, Chestnut street and Locks avenue, Sunday afternoon, February 17 at 1 o'clock. Hon. J. Q. Van Swearingen, president judge of the Fayette county courts has accepted an invitation to be present and make an address. There will also be some interesting services in connection with the unfurling of a service flag, bearing 25 stars representing members of the church and Sabbath school now in the service for world freedom. There will also be some splendid musical numbers on the program. A full program will be announced later. The general public is invited.

SMITHFIELD, Feb. 7.—Mrs. H. O'Neil on the receipt of news that her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charles Crow, had fallen and broken two of her ribs Monday at her home at Martin went there Friday. Mrs. Crow was preparing the family washing when she slipped and fell, her side striking the edge of a bench.

News was received here Friday of the death of George Morgan, a well known and highly respected young man of this community he joined the Mosquito fleet last fall, having previously volunteered for the service. He contracted pneumonia while in the service and was sent to his home at Uniontown. After convalescing he visited his brother, Daniel, at Camp Lee, Va., where he became ill. He was born in Springhill township, a son of the late D. P. Morgan.

Friday's high temperature about got away with the ice in this section. Word received here from Grants Ferry is to the effect that the ice both in the Cheat and Monongahela rivers would probably go out today.

The condition of Mrs. Hannah Abraham, who has had a severe case of blood poisoning of her hand and arm is improved.

Earl Deffenbaugh of Bowwood was a business visitor Thursday.

J. N. O'Neil who has been laid up with Asthma the past two weeks was able to be out Thursday.

DRINK MORE WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat and Take Salts for Backache and Kidney Trouble.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; takes a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. The famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble—adv.

WANTED SAME KIND OF BOND

Colored Man Was Satisfied That He Could Afford It, if the Other Fellow Could.

In many instances prisoners, against whom there is little evidence, or who are thought to be honorable enough to return for trial if they are permitted to go to their homes if released without bond, are permitted to go on their own recognizance. In political vernacular they go on their "O. R."

A short time ago several colored men were arrested charged with assault and battery. All had engaged in a free-for-all fight and two of the men had received several knife wounds. One man, however, told the judge that he arrived on the scene, just as the police came, to see what the excitement was about, and, being mistaken for one of the fighters, was taken to police headquarters with the other men.

When the case was called in police court, it was continued for a few days, and after hearing the story the judge told this man that he would let him out on his "O. R." after he had promised to return on the day of the trial.

One of the other prisoners was so impressed with the easy manner in which his friend got out of jail that he asked for an opportunity to speak, and then said: "Judge, yer honor, I sure would like to get out. I don't know what kind of a bond this 'O. R.' is, but I know this, that if that boy can afford it, so can I, and I am willing to put one up."

The speaker was one of the prime movers in the fight, and the judge decided that his bond would be $400, which was more than he could procure, so he remained in jail.—Indianapolis News.

Showing Him Up.
"We must fight on till the Germans see how absurd their aspirations are," said James W. Gerard in New York the other day.

"Yes, we must show up the dominating German militarism thoroughly," he must not like the professor who visited a loan shark to borrow $100.

"You want $100 for one year?" the loan shark said. "Well, sir, here you are. My terms are 5 per cent a month. That leaves just $40 coming to you. Here you are—four crisp ten spots."

"But the professor mildly took out his own pocketbook and extracted a couple of bills from it.

"You're mistaken, sir," he said. "I want the money for two years, not one. How much, then, is there coming to you?"

CAUSE FOR CHEER, NOT FEAR.

When Hindenburg, the commander of the German army on the western front made the boast the other day that "he would be in Paris by April," the vaunt was considered as having relation only to the military successes he assumed Germany will achieve in "the meantime."

The significant thing about the remark lies less in its boastfulness than it does in the statement to which it was a reply. The occasion calling forth it was a conference between the editors of the most influential newspapers of Germany and the chief of the general staff at which the food supply was the chief topic of discussion.

Coming from widely distributed parts of the German Empire and being in close touch with actual conditions among the people, the editors were able to give the military chieftain information about food and living conditions which the Kaiser's representative might have otherwise been slow to believe. They said to him: "By May there will be no food in Germany." And the great war lord, to avoid talking about an unpleasant and uninteresting subject, and imitating the example of his master, uttered the grandiose words about being in the capital of France at a fixed date.

There is the significance of the incident. The world at large has long suspected that the German leader was all but bare, but the announcement of the editors that their country will be without food by May, more than confirms the belief. Hindenburg's words of course forecast the western drive as the last supreme effort of the German army to crush the Allies before America has reached the self of battle with a force sufficient to turn the tide against the Hun. At the same time they are an attempt to conceal the war lord's dread that General Hunger will be moving in force upon his rear while the attempt is being made to crush the Allies in front.

There is therefore much more cause for cheer than for fear and trembling in the war lord's vain-glorious boast.

OTHER WIRES CROSSED.

We are somewhat surprised, and not a little grieved, to find our contemporary, which boasts so freely and upon such slight provocation, that it is the only real, outward and champion of the rights, liberties and privileges of the "people" against the oppressions and aggressions of monopoly, so strongly and even vehemently advocating the absorption of the Tri-State Telephone company by its rival.

This once relentless foe of "trusts," "big business" and other combinations of capital and interests, would now ruthlessly deprive us of all the benefits of competition and competition, according to the ancient and time-honored tenets of the political party to which our contemporary claims undying allegiance, is the greatest of all boons to mankind, saving and accepting only the boon of a fat federal appointment which is the reward of the faithful and deserving. Instead of continuing a condition that enables persons of moderate means to enjoy the use of a telephone, our neighbor would have us made subject to the merciless exactions of monopoly, control of one of the greatest conveniences of modern life, and with no choice but to pay the price.

Thus would our capitalistic neighbor boost home enterprise, by putting the Fayette county telephone company out of business, and safeguard the interests of the "people" by demanding that they be denied the privilege of competitive telephone service.

To an unprejudiced observer this looks very much as if some wires had been crossed by the recent storm other than those on the Tri-State poles.

OUR AWAKENING.

"We are not going to let them get away with their dirty stuff." That is the homely but expressive sentiment to which 1000 gave voice when they yesterday began to report in large numbers at a Philadelphia recruiting station. And that is just about the way young men all over the country are feeling about the Tuscania tragedy. This happening, with the loss of life which followed, has spurred them to action after all other appeals to become soldiers have failed. The mean, sneaking methods by which Germany is waging war has aroused in these men a desire to "get at" those who play any game unfairly. They have been awakened to a determination to do all that they can to make the nation responsible for such acts as have been committed by Germany in the name of war, pay a heavy penalty.

It is not exact to say that these men are inspired by a spirit of revenge.

They have simply been slow to be aroused to becoming engaged in the "scrap," just as some men are not enthused over sports or games until they witness them or some of their close friends and associates begin to take part in them, and their opponents begin to disregard the rules or play unfairly. From being passively interested they often become regular "fans," ready to fight for the "home club" or their favorite player. In a similar way they will become interested, and later participants, in the great, big game Uncle Sam is now playing. In this respect we are again following the same course of events that transpired in England. Until disasters began to fall heavily upon the first levies of troops sent to stop the progress of the Hun army toward Paris in 1914, the English people as a whole were even more apathetic about the war than we have been. They were quickly and deeply stirred when the casualty lists began to come in and they rallied to the nation's defense with a spirit and determination to "see the thing through" that has since carried the British armies through many arduous campaigns. America is now feeling the same thrill to action that awakened the still more slow going Britisher.

Such an answer to the challenge of Germany is a most wholesome sign. It shows that while the great mass of our people have been lethargic upon the subject of the war, and often but little concerned in the preparations for it, they only need an awakening and they quickly take their part. The rush to enlist which the Tuscania sinking has started, is notice to Germany that America has been stimulated to greater effort to win the war and that we will not stop short of complete victory over Kaiserism and all that it means.

"We are not going to let them get away with their dirty stuff!"

The Friday class of draftees in No. 5 district was a class of 27 called and nearly all—24—chosen.

The Indian Creek Valley is getting in touch with the outside world again.

The proverbial hospitality of Somerset county must have been chilled by the Arctic season, otherwise President William would never have been sent home to mine a full set of treated cars.

The suspension of passenger traffic on the Coal Lick branch of the Pennsylvania railroad restores (temporarily) the direct route to the enjoyment of being the biggest sidetrack village in Fayette county.

Hindenburg boasts that he will be in Paris by April. Won't the Kaiser's Christmas dinner, which he didn't eat in the French capital in 1914, be a trade with the time "Hindy" takes the train under his chin and calls for the first course?

With a total of over 1,200 wires out of 1,410 out of commission, the Tri-State Telephone company has had a trying experience as a result of the storm.

Washington simply cannot get over the habit of discrimination against the north, as witness the order releasing the south from the restriction of "heatless" Monday while the north is permitted to endure another of them.

Positive proof is said to be available to show that German spies in the United States sent news to Berlin of the routing of the Tuscania. This was the time to give the firing squad some practice?

Set His Standard High.
One big trouble in this world is that we do not set our standards high enough. We content ourselves with the performances, and do not pick or critic with care. We suit ourselves.

All this cannot be said about a certain little boy in this town, who got big blackboard and plenty of crayon or Christmas. Whatever the ability of that embryo artist may be, certainly his ambition is boundless.
He went to Sunday school, and while there was much impressed, as usual, with the pictures of Biblical characters shown him.
That afternoon he stood before his blackboard and meditated deeply.
Then he turned to his mother and said:
"I'm going to draw a picture that will surprise you."—Washington Star.

TEACHING ENLISTED MEN FINE POINTS OF NATIONAL GAME AT MARE ISLAND

The photograph shows "Duffy" Lewis, greatest of world's series heroes of the Boston Red Sox, in his uniform as a yeoman in the United States navy teaching the enlisted men the finer points of the national game. The commandant at Mare Island is a great booster and a program of sports is planned for the holiday season, among them a baseball game at Recreation park. Lewis has his heart set on winning this game.

LOW WEIGHT KEEPS GOOD JOCKEYS OUT

Shaw, Dugan, Powers, and Others Cannot Make Scale.

Old timers on the turf are prone to scoff at the ability of the present-day crop of jockeys now riding in this country. They wait long and long and with the deepest of sighs for the days of Stumms, Garrison, Spencer, Sloan and the rest, who rode in the vanished years termed "the good old days."

As a rule, there is little sympathy with those who continually harp on the superiority of athletes of the past over the present. Usually there is no real basis for their contention that participants in sport have grown less skillful with the lapse of years. However, when it comes to the jockey question the old timer is right. The present rider does not compare with those of ten years ago. They never will regain their prestige, either, as long as the jockey club persists in racing at the ridiculously low scale of weights now in vogue.

Dugan is back. Willie Dugan, just back from Russia, is a great jockey. He has been riding with marked success in Russia for several years. He was recognized as a top-notch rider here before going abroad. The war has driven Willie back to this country, as it did his brother Eddie. But Willie will not be able to ride here. He is no longer a youngster. He cannot do 110 pounds and under, and could not get enough mounts over that weight under the present system he holds his form.

Shaw is a great jockey—greater than Dugan ever was. In all the history of the turf there are not a half dozen riders who can be rated beyond him. Shaw is here, ready to ride, but finds he is too heavy. He has been riding for years in Germany. He, too, is out of employment because of the war.

Powers Good Boy. Then there is Lincoln Powers. Just a few years ago he was the running jockey of the country on the flat. Now he has to ride over the jumps, because he can't do better than 110 pounds. Powers tried to train down the turf and ride on the flat again. He found the effort too much for him.

Here are three instances, not of ordinary jockeys, but great riders, whose services would be available under a sane scale. To the list might be added Joe Notter, who, although he can make 115 pounds, is able to ride only to the big stakes, and Eddie Dugan, who at 112 pounds is on the ground most of the time.

Athletes in Service. Harvard boasts 58 varsity H athletes in the government's military service. Yale has 66 and Dartmouth 54, exclusively among New England institutions.

BASEBALLS GOING UP WITHOUT BEING HIT

Baseballs are going up. According to dealers in sporting goods, the regulation ball used by big league teams which have been selling for $1.25 will cost $1.50 next season.

Other sporting goods, including golf clubs, lawn tennis racquets, footballs, golf balls and general athletic equipment also will be advanced in price from 15 to 25 per cent.

LETTER TO TWELVE MARDONS

Is Distributed to Coach Staggs' Chicago Athletes—Sure Things Are Overlooked.

Twelve members of the University of Chicago football squad have been awarded letters for their efforts on the gridiron during the recent season. The announcement of the names of the new "C" men occasioned somewhat of a surprise on the campus, not only because it was the smallest number ever given the coveted honor, but because two men who were regarded as sure things were overlooked.

Elton, One of Lucky Few.

The players receiving the award were: Block, Bondzinski, Brelas, Cochran, Elton, Gorgas, Higgins, Jackson, McDonald, Melton, Mostman and Rouse.

Here Comes the Goshawk. A warning to sportsmen and others that a dangerous migration is in progress from the arctic regions has been issued by the Iowa fish and game commissioners.

The present invasion is said to be the most serious since that of eleven years ago, when the birds driven southward by a scarcity of hare and ptarmigan came to this state and devoured grouse by the wholesale.

The goshawk, which, unlike other hawks, flies straightaway, instead of in circles, is somewhat larger than a pigeon. Exchange.

INDICATIONS FOR GOLF ARE BRIGHT

Now an Established Recreation for Old and Young Alike.

FAVOR LIBERTY TOURNAMENT

Growth of Game Surpasses Most Optimistic Predictions of Handful of Organizers of United States Golf Association.

(By HOWARD F. WHITNEY, Secretary United States Golf Association.)

The indications for the coming year in the golfing world are promising. The game will be played more than ever as it is now an established recreation or benefit for old and young alike. The association is desirous of holding a second Liberty Tournament in 1918 and will endeavor to reach every club in the country, the number of which is estimated to be between 2,500 and 3,000. This tournament and the open patriotic tournament, given for charity, held at Whitmarsh Valley, were the only two competitions held under the direction of the United States Golf Association in 1917, the association having adopted the policy of cancelling its championships due to the war situation now prevailing.

Growth of Game.

The growth of the game of golf in the United States during the last 25 years has far surpassed the most optimistic prediction of the handful of enthusiasts who organized the United States Golf Association on December 22, 1894. Its popularity and benefits soon became apparent, however, and some idea of the expansion of the game may be gained by looking over the report of the Liberty Tournament held under the auspices of the United States Golf Association on July 4, 1917, from which it will be interesting to note that the association communicated with no less than 1,497 golf clubs.

Every state in the Union was represented in this event except Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico and Oregon, and the amount received at the time the report was issued in October was over $72,000. Since that time, however, the total has been increased to more than $86,000, due to late returns from clubs, and demonstrated that the golfers of the United States exerted themselves to make this event a nation-wide, patriotic testimonial. The tournament was carried on with the hearty cooperation of the American Red Cross and owes much of its success to their willing efforts. The success of this effort alone fixes the status of golf in America as a recreational and competitive pastime which will endure even under the handicaps necessary and incidental to wartime.

SWIMMING HOLDING ITS OWN

Some Clubs and Colleges Not Giving Attention to Water Sports on Account of War.

Although most of the organizations interested in water sports have endeavored to enlarge the scope of their activities on account of the war, some clubs, colleges and Y. M. C. A. branches are taking the opposite course and withdrawing from aquatic altogether, probably not realizing what their support means, says a writer in the Milwaukee Sentinel.

They should bear in mind that swimming is not solely a sport, but an essential item in the physical education of every man and woman, fitting as it does for self-protection and life saving so that there is more reason than ever to encourage its practice at these times, particularly with competition, which undoubtedly serves as the great out of incentives.

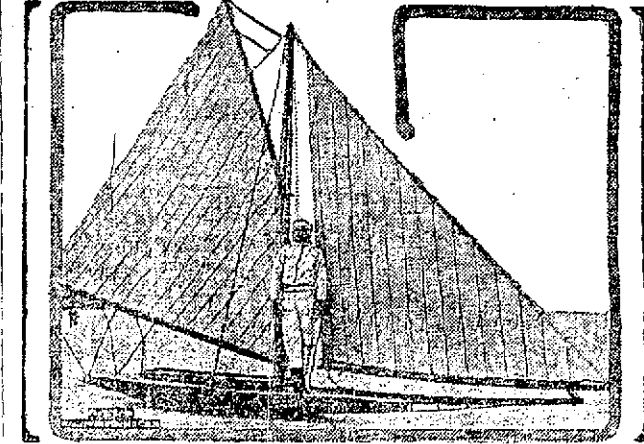

The claim has been raised that racing is of no practical advantage, because it only attracts experienced swimmers, fully developed. But this is a great mistake. The right kind of competition will draw into action the very people most in need of improvement—those having mastered the principles, yet not sufficiently advanced to care for themselves or others in case of danger.

Phillis Sign Scout. Pat Moran has signed Billy Doyle of Portsmouth, Ohio to scout for the Philadelphia Nationals. Doyle enjoys quite a reputation as a scout and is said to have a number of youngsters of ability within his reach.

Williams Is in France. Lieut. R. Norris Williams, the field tennis champion, is at the field artillery school of instruction somewhere in France.

Chief Meyers After Job. Chief Meyers is wintering on a farm in Connecticut and is anxious to sign with one of the major league clubs.

FAST LITTLE SCOOTERS SPEED OVER FROZEN SURFACE OF GREAT SOUTH BAY

Recent cold weather has given the ice yachtsmen around Patchogue, L. I., an opportunity to enjoy their favorite sport. The Scooter, which is a small flat-bottom boat on smooth steel runners, has the advantage over the ice boat of the triangular regulation type in that it can readily sail over open spaces without danger to the occupants of the boat.

PLAN FOR HOME FOR AGED BALL PLAYERS

The idea of building a home for aged ball players has been brought up again, and may receive considerable attention from the managers at the coming meetings.

Plans have even been drawn for the proposed home, and one set of blue-prints has been favorably noted by Charlie Weidman, Barney Dreyfuss and Harry Frazee.

This particular design allows for a building much on the pattern of an athletic club, with a huge yard, big enough for the old boys to toss the ball and run bases, while there will be pitching courts and batting cages to divert them in winter time.

ENSIGN COMMISSION WON BY (CUPID) C. E. BLACK

"Cupid" C. E. Black, former Yale football captain, who has been captain of the eleven of the Second naval district, and himself a boatswain's mate of the Naval Reserve force, has won a commission as ensign and has been recommended for duties on vessels of the fleet which might require all-round knowledge.

Black will be sent to the Naval academy to undergo a course of 10 weeks, when he will be given sea duty.

MAY PLAY WITHOUT CAPTAIN

Michigan's Football Team May Be Without Leader in 1918—Veteran Material Reduced.

Michigan's 1918 football eleven may again be captainless. "Dad" Wieman of California, who recently was elected, has announced his intention of entering the aviation corps. Wieman was unanimously chosen for captain by the 18 letter men. Last year "Pat" Smith of Bay City was chosen captain, but when war came he joined the naval forces.

Wieman played only Rugby football before he came to Michigan. He made the freshman team, however, and has been a "varsity" star for two seasons. He played tackle in 1916, but was shifted to fullback this season. He scored 125 of Michigan's 394 points in 1917. Michigan's great mass of veteran material for her 1918 eleven is steadily being reduced. Sparks, Rye and Weston have been accepted for the aviation service. All of these men were stars.

SPORT ACTIVITIES AFTER END OF WAR

Baseball, Football and Boxing, Will Have Larger Following.

Instruction Given in Various Camps, Sure to Develop Many Devotees of Sport, Who Have Never Before Been Interested.

Baseball, boxing and football are going to have larger followings after the war than they have today.

That this will be true in baseball particularly is the prediction of many men high up in the game, and it has been pointed out by followers of boxing that the instruction being given the soldiers in all of Uncle Sam's training camps will develop thousands of devotees of the manly art who have never before been interested.

Football, which has been growing by leaps and bounds within the past five years, may not gain many active participants through the formation of training camp eleven, but it will certainly gain in popularity.

At Close of Civil War.

The pathway to success for present day baseball in the United States was opened wide with the close of the Civil war. Hundreds of soldiers returned from the battlefields on which the blue and gray armies fought their many great conflicts hardened through the rigors of service in the open and demanding some form of sport competition, or, at least, recreation, upon which to center their interest and in which those who brought youth back with them could find active exercise.

From the ending of the Civil war to the present day baseball has been gaining in popularity. It has suffered several trade shocks owing to internal strife, but as an attraction which gained and held public interest it has developed wonderfully.

Ask Red-Blooded Recreation. With thousands of Uncle Sam's soldier boys equipped with baseball, boxing and football paraphernalia while in the service, thousands of young bloods coming on who will demand red-blooded recreations and pastimes on a larger scale than ever before and the country at large weary of death-dealing conflicts and grateful for the chance to relax, sports should thrive on a greater scale than ever.

Sports will be encouraged in every way possible by the government, too. President Wilson, Secretary of War Baker and many of our lawmakers at Washington, have openly expressed the opinion that blood-giving sports should be encouraged and continued throughout the length and breadth of the land, even in war times.

COACHES ARE BEING SHELVED

University of California Started Movement and Other Institutions Are to Follow.

Paid coaches are being shelved out on the Pacific coast.

The University of California has started the movement and it is said that other institutions in the state are considering similar moves.

At California the basketball, baseball, wrestling and boxing coaches have been let out, and it is very likely that the crew tutor will not be re-assigned.

Andy Smith and Gus Zeigler, the two former Penn stars, who are football coaches at California, will be retained.

Play Indoor Baseball. Canadian soldiers in Toronto camp play indoor baseball.

A Purposeful Formula

Senreco's formula is not "Just a little of this and a little of that."

It was devised with a definite object in view.

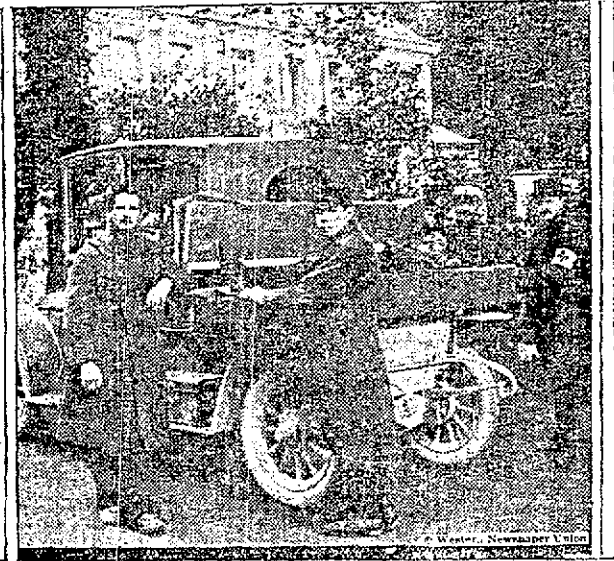

The object was to produce a tooth paste possessing medicinal as well as cleansing properties—a real cleanser that could be depended upon to remove tartar and keep mouth and gums healthy.

The ideal defined, our laboratories set about to determine the proper combination to produce it. Senreco is the result. It has been tried, tested and pronounced good by hundreds of the profession. Try a tube. A single tube will prove every claim. Will show why thousands today use and demand Senreco—and are satisfied with nothing less. All druggists and toilet counters. Large 2 oz. tube—25c.

Long Live The King

MARY ROBERTS REINHART

The following morning the Countess Loschek left for a holiday. She had the choice of but two alternatives, to go as she had been commanded, for it amounted to that, or to die. The committee would not kill her; in case she failed them, it would be unnecessary. Though that they place the letter and the code in the hands of the authorities, by some anonymous means. Well enough she knew the chancellor's inflexible anger, and the Archduchess Annuncata's cold rage. They would sweep her away with a gesture, and she would die the death of all traitors. A week! Time had been when a week of the dragging days at the palace had seemed eternity. Now the hours flew. The gold clock on the dressing table, a gift from the archduchess, marked them with flying hands.

During the afternoon came a package, rather unostentatiously tied with a gilt cord. Opening it, the countess disclosed a glove box of wood, with a design of rather shaky violets burnt into the cover. Inside was a note:

I am very sorry you are sick. This is to put your gloves in when you travel. Please excuse the work. I have done it in a hurry.

FERDINAND WILLIAM OTTO.

Suddenly the countess laughed, choking hysterical laughter that alarmed Minna; horrible laughter, which left her paler than ever, and gasping.

The old castle of the Loscheks looked grim and inhospitable when she reached it that night. Built during the years when the unbeliever overran southern Europe, it stood in a commanding position over a valley, and a steep, walled road led up to it.

But, its ancient glory and good reputation departed, its garrison gone, its drawbridge and moat things of the past, its very hangings and furnishings moldering from long neglect, it hung over the valley, a lost menace, in an empty threat.

To this dreary refuge the countess had fled. She wanted the silence of its still rooms to which to think. Wretched herself, its wretchedness called her. As the carriage which had brought her from the railway turned into its woods, and she breathed the pungent odor of pine and balsam, she relaxed for the first time.

Why was she so hopeless? She could escape. She knew the woods well. None who followed her could know them so well. She would get away, and somewhere, in a new world, make a fresh start. Surely, after all, peace was the greatest thing in the world.

The carriage drove on at Minna, on the box, crossed herself at sight of the church, and chatted with the driver, a great figure who crowded her to the very edge of the seat.

"I am glad to be here," she said. "I am sick of grandeur. My home is in Etzel." She turned and inspected the man beside her. "You are a new-comer, I think?"

"I have just come to Etzel." "Then you cannot tell me about my people." She was disappointed.

"And you," inquired the driver, "you will stay for a visit?"

"A week only. But better than nothing."

"After that, you return to the city?" "Yes, madame. The countess—your would know, if you were Etzel-born—madame the countess is lady in waiting to her royal highness, the Archduchess Annuncata."

"So!" said the driver. But he was not curious, and the broken road demanded his attention. He was but newly come, so very newly that he did not know his way, and once made a wrong turning.

The countess relaxed. She slept that night.

When she had breakfasted and dressed, she went out on a balcony, and looked down at the valley. Her eyes dropped to the old wall below, where to the sunshine the caretaker was beating a rug. Close to him, in the distance and cautious conversation, was the driver of the night before. Glancing up, they saw her and at once separated.

There was peace, then. The countess knew—knew certainly. "Our eyes see everywhere," Eyes indeed—eyes that even now the caretaker raised furtively from his rug.

Nevertheless, the countess was minded to experiment, to be certain. For none is so glibly suspicious, she knew, as one who fears suspicion. None so glibly as the guilty. During the forenoon she walked through the woods, going briskly, with vigorous, unobtrusively tread. No crackle of underbrush disturbed her. Swift turnings revealed no lurking figures skulking behind the trunks of trees. But where an ancient stone bridge crossed a mountain stream, she came on the huge driver of the night before reflectively fishing.

He saluted her gravely, and the countess paused and looked at him. "You have caught no fish, my friend?" she said.

"No, madame. But one plays about my hook."

She turned back. Eyes everywhere, and arms, great hairy arms. And feet that, for all their size, must step lightly!

On the second day she made a desperate resolve, and characteristically put it into execution at once. She sent for the caretaker. When he came, necessary, for the Loscheks were justly feared in the countryside, and even the thing of which he knew gave him small courage, she lost no time in evasion.

"Go," she said, "and bring here your accomplice."

"My accomplice, madame! I do not."

"You heard me," she said.

He turned, half sullen, half terrified, and paused. "Which do you refer to, madame?"

She had seen only the one. Then there were others. Who could tell how many others?

"The one who drove here."

So he went, leaving her to desperate reflection. When he returned, it was to usher in the heavy figure of the spy.

"Which of you is in authority?" she demanded.

"I, madame." It was the spy who spoke.

She dismissed the caretaker with a gesture.

"Have you any discretion over me? Or must you refer matters to those who sent you?"

"I must refer to them."

"How long will it take to send a message and receive a reply?"

He considered. "Until tomorrow night, madame."

Another day gone, then, and nothing determined!

"Now, listen," she said, "and listen carefully. I have come here to decide the king, and had found him uneasy and restless."

"Sit down," the king had said. "I need steady, old friend."

"Steady, old friend?"

"I have had a visit from Hedwig. Rather a stormy one, poor child. He turned and fixed on his chancellor his faded eyes. 'You still think it is the best thing?'"

"It is the only thing."

"But all this haste," put in the king, querulously. "Is that so necessary? Hedwig begs for time. She hardly knows the man."

"Time! But I thought—He hesitated. How say to a dying man that time was the one thing he did not need?"

"Another thing. She was incoherent, but I gathered that there was some one else. The whole interview was cynical. It seems, however, that this young protégé of yours, Larisch, has been making love to her over Otto's head."

Mettlich's face hardened, a gradual process, as the news penetrated in all its significance.

"A boy and girl affair, sire. He is loyal. And in all of this, you and I are reckoning without Karl. The princess hardly knows him, and naturally she is terrified. But his approaching visit will make many changes. He is a fine figure of a man, and women—"

"Exactly," said the king dryly. What the chancellor meant was that women always had loved Karl, and the king understood.

"His wild days are over," bluntly observed the chancellor. "He is forty, sire."

"Aye," said the king. "And at forty a man changes his nature, and purifies himself in marriage! Nonsense, Karl will be as he has always been. But we have gone into this before. Only, I am sorry for Hedwig. Get rid of this young Larisch."

The chancellor sat reflecting, his chin dropped forward on his breast. "Otto will miss him."

"Well, out with it. I may not dismiss him. What, then?"

"It is always easy to send men away. But it is sometimes better to retain them, and force them to your will. We have here an arrangement that is satisfactory. Larisch is keen, young, and loyal. Hedwig has thrown herself at him. For that, sire, she is responsible, not he."

"Then get rid of her," growled the king.

The chancellor rose. "If the situation is left to me, sire," he said, "I will promise two things. That Otto will keep his friend, and that the Princess Hedwig will bow to your wishes without further argument."

"Do it, and God help you," said the king, again with the flicker of amusement.

The chancellor had gone home, walking heavily along the darkening streets. Once again he had conquered. The reins remained in his guarded old hands. And he was about to go, in the honor of the country, to the keeping of the son of Maria Menrad, whom he had once loved.

So now he sat in his study, and waited. When he heard Nikky's quick step as he came along the life passage, he picked up his pipe.

Nikky saluted, and made his way across the room in the twilight, with the ease of familiarity. "So we have him, sire," he apologized. "We found our man, and he is safely jailed. He made no resistance."

"Sit down," said the chancellor. And, touching a bell, he asked Mathilde for coffee. "So we have him," he reflected. "The next thing is to discover if he knows who his assailants were. That, and the person for whom he acted—however, I sent for you for another reason. What is this about the Princess Hedwig?"

"The Princess Hedwig?"

"What folly, boy! A young girl who cannot know her own mind! And for such a bit of romantic trifling you would ruin yourself. It is ruin. You know that."

Nikky remained silent, a little sulken.

"The princess went to the king with her story this evening. The boy started. 'A cruel proceeding, but the young are always cruel. The expected result has followed: The king wishes you sent away.'"

"I am at his command, sire."

The chancellor filled his pipe from a bowl near by, working deliberately. Nikky sat still, rather rigid.

"May I ask," he said at last, "that you say to the king that the responsibility is mine? No possible blame can attach to the Princess Hedwig. I love her, and—I am not clever. I show what I feel."

"The immediate result," said the chancellor cruelly, "will doubtless be a putting forward of the date of her marriage." Nikky's hands clenched.

"The king, and had found him uneasy and restless."

"Sit down," the king had said. "I need steady, old friend."

"Steady, old friend?"

"It's quite fresh," he said, as they walked together across the place. "I'll give it to you when we get to the riding school. I saw the woman myself take it out of her basket. So it has no germs on it."

That afternoon, attired in his uniform of the guards, the crown prince received the delegation of citizens in the great audience chamber of the palace, a solitary little figure, standing on the red carpet before the dais at the end. "The chancellor stood near the boy, resplendent in his dress uniform, a blue ribbon across his shirt front, over which Mathilde had taken hours. He was the Mettlich of the public eye now, hard of features, impassive, indefinable.

He had staged the affair well. The crown prince, standing alone, so small, so appealing, against his magnificent background, was a picture to touch the heart. Not for nothing had Mettlich studied the people, read their essential simplicity, their answer to any appeal to the heart. These men were men of family. Surely no father of a son could see that lonely child and not offer him loyalty.

With the same wisdom, he had given the boy small instruction, and no speech of thanks. "Let him say what comes into his head," Mettlich had reasoned. "It will at least be spontaneous and boyish."

The first formalities over, and the crown prince having shaken hands nine times, the spokesman stepped forward. He had brought a long, written speech, which had already been given to the newspapers. But after a moment's hesitation he folded it up.

"Your royal highness," he said, looking down. "I have here a long speech, but all that it contains I can say briefly. It is your birthday, highness. We come, representing many others, to present to you our congratulations, and—the love of your people. It is our hope," he paused. Emotion and excitement were getting the better of him—"our hope, highness, that you will have many happy years. To further that hope, we are here today to say that we, representing all classes, are your most loyal subjects. We have fought for your majesty the king, and if necessary, we will fight for you."

He glanced beyond the child at the council, and his tone was strong and impassioned. "But today we are here, not to speak of war, but to present to you our congratulations, our devotion, and our loyalty."

Also a casket. He had forgotten that. He stepped back, was nudged, and recollected.

"Also a gift," he said, and roined a fine speech among smiles. But the presentation took place in due order, and Otto cleared his throat.

WITNESS TELLS OF LOOTING OF CZAR'S PALACE

Winter Home of Muscovite
Ruler Devastated By Bolsheviki Soldiers.

SERVANTS TAKE A HAND

Everything of Value is Carried Off,
According to Newspaper Correspondent Who Visited the Scene and After Bombardment of Place.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Moscow newspaper Otro Rossi (More of Russia), who in the issue of November 21 described the siege and capture of the Winter Palace by the Bolshevik forces and the perilous march of the arrested Kerensky ministers from the palace to the Fortress of Peter and Paul, gives in the same paper a picture of the looted Winter Palace and of the events of the next six days, including the attempt of the Municipal Council of Petrograd to assume the reins of power in the capital and form a coalition ministry with representatives of all parties.

"I succeeded," he says, "in walking through the palace a few hours after the bombardment. The corpses of the soldiers of the Women's Battalion, killed in defense of the palace, had already been removed but through the iron gate could be seen the heaps of empty shells, torn mullion bells, books and leaflets. The whole facade of the palace was riddled by shells,
the white scars standing out in striking contrast to the red of the walls.
The palace guard consisted of strong pickets of sailors and soldiers, heavily armed and covered with cartridge belts.

"When I entered the first floor I saw a picture of complete devastation amid which moved soldiers and sailors searching the rooms and adding to the confusion. All the drawers of the sideboards and cupboards had been broken open, all the chairs smashed and the wrecked furniture thrown together in heaps. On the beds and sofas broken boxes, lamps, chandeliers and porcelain had been thrown. The corridors were filled with torn papers, fragments and scraps of the magnificent tapestries, and broken furniture. Everywhere absolute chaos.

"In the rooms where the electric fittings had been stored the soldiers, having carried off everything that seemed to have any value, were amusing themselves and a crowd of applauding spectators by smashing the electric bulbs. In one room I saw a soldier hacking away the valuable tapestries from a couch with a table knife. On the second floor the scene was even gloomier. Everywhere dirt, indescribable, mattresses over all the floors, soldiers quatted at their meals on the wonderful couches of the imperial furniture, spilling soup and greasy bits of meat upon the priceless tapestries.

"The palace servants were no whit behind the soldiers at the looting and went around with bags collecting what struck their fancies. In the Round Hall the soldiers had set up an enormous kettle and were cooking their soup. In the room of the Press Bureau all the papers had been torn to bits. In the Picture Gallery many pictures had been slashed to strips of painted rags. In one room heavy guns had been set up. Windows were pierced with bullets. It was a nightmare of destruction."

The eighth of November, the day following the siege, passed quietly, the street cars were running everywhere, the number of patrols had decreased and absolute order prevailed.
The Municipal Council had passed a resolution, instructing the population to defend itself against looting, by use of arms if necessary, and though the Bolshevik authorities opposed this order, the formation of house committees of self-defense went steadily forward.

The representatives of the Allied powers held long conferences but no decision regarding recognition of the new regime was taken and it was stated that special instructions from the respective governments would be necessary as there was now no one established government in the country. Leon Trotsky had visited the foreign office, announced himself as the foreign minister of the new government and asked for the "Secret Treaties of the Allies." He was told to his amazement, that documents relating to arrangements made during the war were incorporated in the protocols of the Interallied Conference and were not available in Petrograd.

BRITISH TANK PUT OUT OF ACTION BY GERMAN SHELLS

The tanks of the British have proved very effective against the Germans, but even these powerful machines are not proof against the explosive shells of the enemy. This photograph, just received from the west front, shows one of the tanks that was put out of action in a hard fight.

"SUNSHINE ALLEY"—The quaint-est play of a quaint actress is being presented today. Mae Marsh, the col-orated actress, often spoken of as the girl with a thousand faces is seen in the leading role and everything is so invested with spontaneity that her work is refreshing to a great degree. Miss Marsh is known throughout the world as the bright particular star of "The Birth of a Nation" and of "Intolerance". She is also known as the country over as "whim girl of the film." The story of "Sunshine Alley" was written especially to fit the peculiar talents of Miss Marsh by Mary Rider, the dramatist. The picture is all that its name implies, being radiant with optimism. "The entire story is woven about the love of a little girl, Nell Harboe (Mae Marsh) for her marvelous bullfinch, a bird that has learned the arias of four operas. Nell's old grandfather who runs a small bird store in a poor quarter of a great city, while trying to recall Carlo, his wayward grandson as run down by an automobile belonging to a millionaire by the name of Morris. Mrs. Morris by way of forestalling a possible claim of damages offers to buy the beautiful bullfinch, but Harboe refuses to sell it because it is so dearly loved by his little granddaughter. Robert Harboe, in the role of Ned Morris, is seen as the leading support to Miss Marsh. A selected comedy is also shown. Monday
Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will appear in "Ted White and Blue" a Metro attraction.

THE SOISON.

Those who surmise the actor's life to be an easy one are in the dark as to true conditions says W. James Bodell, leading man and stage director with the Paul Hillis Manhattan Players. How did I land into theatrical business? It was this way. I had always been fond of the theater and almost all my spare evenings were spent in the playhouses of my home town, Philadelphia. My days were full of routine work in the general office of the Pennsylvania Railroad company but I frankly confess that in many cases when I should have been acting figures I was dreaming of my favorite player. My first professional engagement was with the stock company at the Park Theater in the Quaker City. Before very long I got beyond the "My lord the carriage wants" stage and good fortune made it possible for me to have a little stock company within a stone thrown of my own home. The neighbors were good to me and everything went smoothly until the fire commissioner decided that my little theater did not meet the city requirements and we had to close up. Shortly after I met Mr. Hillis and I have been under his management with the Chicago Stock Company as leading man. Oh yes the daily grind is what I set out to tell you about. My wife's faithful Big Ben arouses me early, too early every morning and after a hasty bath and a cup of coffee it's off to the theater where the rehearsal is called for ninethirty of at least eleven. We wade through the play in preparation until noon or later and then rush off for a lunch in some nearby restaurant.
Matinee begins at two-thirty and lasts until around five. Dinner is the next thing on the calendar followed by the day's only recreation, a game of cards in company with Mr. War and Mr.
Hillis. It is necessary to be back in the theater by seven-thirty to get ready for the night show. This is the end of a perfect day? Oh no. When I get back to my apartment on with a bathtub and slippers to familiarize myself with the manuscript of some play Mr. Hillis has secured followed by an hour of good hard study on the

THERE ARE CASUALTIES IN TRAINING FOR WAR JUST AS IN WAR ITSELF

Letter of Connellsville Boy Tells of the Bumps, Bruises and Sprains Received in Strenuous Drills.

There are casualties in the business of training for war just as there are in putting that training into practice as a letter from a Connellsville boy now at Camp Lee relates. The letter was written by Elmer R. Harmon, a member of Company I, 319th Infantry, and a son of Allen S. Harmon of East Crawford avenue, and follows in part:

"Camp life seems to be agreeing with me as I have gained considerable weight and feel better than I ever did. We have plenty to eat.
While it is not put up or cooked as mother would, we can live on it. I have plenty of clothing and get more rest here than I would at home. We worked very hard until Thanksgiving Day, then had a week's rest, so bad that we got very little accomplished for over a month. Since returning from furlough they have been working very hard but we will not be able to drill for some time yet as we had several hard snows.

"Last week our company spent the week away from camp, serving on out-post duty; part of the time was pleasant, the other part of the time was very rough. But taking it all through we were in the mountains camping. We were guarding a power station between Petersburg and Richmond on the Norfolk & Western railroad. Passing trains supplied us with coal.

"Should you visit our camp you would almost think the United States was preparing to fight Germany, or some one right here as the place is threw open with trenches, many ditches of them. They are used for training purposes. Many other things would lead one to think of the front.
I had one mishap several months ago, while jumping hurdles. I missed my footing, falling on my shoulder, spraining the ligaments. Outside of throwing anything I have fairly good use of it now. During that time there was never a day went by that there was not a number of men taken to the hospital for bruises, sprains, breaks and cuts, or hurts in some way or other.

part I am going to play next. Just now I am working on "Pietty Peggy O'More", which I am sure Connellsville people will enjoy. I consider it one of the funniest and altogether charming little plays I have ever produced. The point I want to make is this. If ever you have labored under the delusion that we players have the life of Reilly you're wrong Steve,
all wrong.

"REACHING FOR THE MOON"—
A whirlwind of action and a riot of fun and typically Fairbanks describes the new Douglas Fairbanks film, "Reaching for the Moon," produced for the Arterial. Douglas is somewhat of a philosopher, and has always contended that if a man can make good in a small way he can develop himself to succeed in a bigger venture. Monday Douglas Fairbanks will be shown in the Triangle feature, "The Lamb."

"Buy in Connellsville"

Campaign Launched

The Leading Merchants Co-Operate

Educational Advantages of "Buying in Connellsville" to be Presented in a Series of Strikingly Forceful and Instructive Cartoons and Articles to Appear in the Columns of "The Courier."

Here are ten reasons, that are good, why people in and around Connellsville should trade here:

FIRST—A town that is good enough for a man to live in is good enough for him to trade in.

SECOND—The good farmer puts everything back into the soil that he can. Likewise the good citizen should put all he can into his own community.

THIRD—If the farmer will patronize the merchant, then the merchant will in turn patronize the farmer, and mutual patronage brings mutual prosperity.

FOURTH—By keeping Connellsville's earned money in Connellsville there will be no danger of hard times or financial stringencies.

FIFTH—It is unreasonable that money earned in and around Connellsville should be sent to Chicago, St. Louis or New York; there to build beautiful churches, schools and sky-piercing buildings. Where is the money coming from to build these things for us?

SIXTH—Every dollar invested or spent in Connellsville helps Connellsville and consequently you get a dollar's worth, while every cent sent out of this county helps some other city or community.

SEVENTH—Community spirit is the greatest city builder known. This campaign reaches community spirit above all things else.

EIGHTH—Intense cultivation of Connellsville's resources and advantages will make it a very wealthy city.

NINTH—It is to the individual benefit of every citizen of this community to trade in Connellsville. It is the only sound, economic principle, since out of the pockets of home industries are paid the taxes that support the commonwealth.

TENTH—Connellsville is a "farm", waiting for cultivation. Dollars planted here will bring in a surprisingly large harvest in a very short time. It will mean more jobs, bigger salaries, more homes and prosperity for all.

Citizenship and patriotism consist of something more than voting, paying taxes and cheering the flag. In case of war, could you respect a neighbor who deserted your flag, joined the enemy and fought against the country which had given him freedom, opportunity and happiness?

You can't afford to desert Connellsville in which you live—from which you get your living. The welfare of your home should be your first thought because you rise or fall with it.

Don't be a slacker when you buy; buy from these merchants.
